Question Submitted: 5/17/2004

Question Number: 1

My question pertains to the conduit to be bored or jacked on the above mentioned project, item code 603E96600. It asks for 36" and 42" Type A conduit to be bored or jacked. Under the ODOT Spec book, it lists many various materials that can be used as Type A conduit, including the Precoated, galvanized steel culverts. My question is: If I have a precoated steel casing of proper diameter and wall thickness galvanized, and install this via the boring method to be used as the drainage culvert itself, does this meet the Precoated, galvanized steel culvert spec of Type A conduits.

The district has reviewed your question and has determined that the bidding documents are adequately clear. No addendum will be issued. Please prepare your bid based upon what is shown in the bidding documents.
